James W. Osborne, counsel for Mr.

Q. You admitted, didn't you. Mrs. Rich, that Mr. Rich gave you jewels worth $35.00? A. I admitted that he gave me jewels that he said were worth that amount, but I didn't want them.

Miss Edna Josephine Rich, the daughter of Mrs. Rich, followed her mother on the stand. She said she was twenty years old and did not know that Mr. Rich was not her father until last fall. Her mother was mistress of the house up to Dec. 15 last.

"I never noticed my father's condition until last December of Lawrence." "I never noticed my father's condition until last December or January," she

Mrs. Rich, being recalled, was asked if she had ever violated her marriage vows, and she answered that the charge was unfounded, decidedly so.

This closed the case for the plaintiff and fair. Osborne opened the case for the defendant by calling Rich to the stand. Mr. Rich fold about his starting as a salesman and his progress in business until he is new in charge of the diamond buying for Black. Starr & Frost, which amounts to hundreds of thousands of collars a year.

Tros tile time of his marriage until December, 192, he never took a drink. Blace then, at the New York Athletic Cith, he has drank Scotch ale with his meals. He denied that he ever was drugs in his life. Then he explained the trouble with his wife. United Board of Building Trades will meet this afternoon for the purpose of taking the matter up. Actual success of The World's efforts along this line have been attained with the Plasterers' Union, which by arrangement with Con-tractor John E. The United Board of Building Trades will also meet this afternoon to decide what attitude it will adopt toward the Team-Drivers' Union, to which it has given recognition, though the teamdrivers, unlike all others allied with the United Board, are not skilled laborers. If the United Board should decide that it cannot stand by the drivers in their oloy none but members of the newly formed union, a speedy solution of the existing lockout will be reached.

The Building Constructors' Associa-tion, which is the central body of the trades unions ailied with the Knights of Labor, meets to-day and will probably pass resolutions favoring the emboyers' union and its stand against walking delegates. Master Workman John W.
